For the Asom Jatiyatabadi Yuva Chatra Parishad, August 4 will be a Black day. The student body is going to do it in protest against the government's failure to rein in the stepped up activities of the fundamentalist forces in the state.

According to the AJYCP general secretary Manoj Baruah, the indigenous people in Assam are living on the edge in the face of the continuing infiltration of Bangladeshi people from across the Indo-Bangla border and also the stepped up activities of the fundamentalist forces. Baruah said the government both in Delhi and Dispur have been failing to rein in these over the years.
