New Delhi: The Delhi High Court on Tuesday granted bail to Debangana Kalita three months after the police arrested the JNU researcher alleging involvement in the orgy of violence in the north eastern parts of the national capital.

A bench of the court of Justice SK Kite, which heard the petition was not convinced by the evidence produced by Delhi police before the court justifying her arrest. Delhi police produced CCTV footage in support of her arrest. But the court said that there were not convincing evidence to establish Devangana's role to incite the violence in February and March this year.

She was arrested under various Sections registering 4 cases and she procured bail in all the four cases against her.
