The indefinite economic blockade in Sonitpur and Dhemaji districts seems to have land Arunachal Pradesh in huge trouble.

The neighbouring state seems to have been heading for yet period of crippling crisis in the absence of essential commodities.

The state has received hardly anything for the last three days because of the blockade as hundreds of trucks carrying essential commodities have been remaining stranded in different places.

According to sources, the stock of essential commodities is likely to end soon if this blockade is allowed to continue in Sonitpur district in protest against the killing of ten villagers in Chauldhua forest.
