Assam Governor Janaki Ballav Patnaik on Thursday urged the Centre to help the north eastern region become a hub of organic cultivation because of its organic soil.

Speaking at a workshop on 'Policy initiatives for promoting partnership between stakeholders in agriculture with particular reference to rain-fed and dryland farming' organised by the Rashtrapati Bhavan in Delhi he said that the sector is not cost-effective due to high value of certification works at the initial stage and needs the Centre's help and assistance to set up an export market in the region.
