The newly floated regional party, the Rajior Dal has sent a proposal to another new regional party in Assam, the AJP, calling upon the latter to form a pre-poll alliance with it in order to oust the BJP from power. The party has even sought a merger of the both parties. Revealing these in a press conference, on Sunday the Working President of the Rajior Dal, Bhasko de Saikia said that for the sake of the greater interest of the Assamese nationalism and to oust the BJP -led alliance from power pre-alliance between the two parties has become the need of the hour. “ We want to form alliance with the Rajior Dal. Already, we have sent a written proposal to the leadership of the Rajior Dal. The people of Assam also want alliance between us. We hope that the AJP would organise a meeting for that purpose. We are to take part in a discussion with them”, Saikia said. He also cautioned that time is too short, hoping that the AJP would immediately take a decision in the regard. Criticising the BJP the Rajior Dal leader alleged that the people of Assam and their language and culture are not safe in the hands of the saffron party. “The BJP is a party of corporates and our language and culture is not safe in their hand. We must unite to check the party and its divisive politics”, He said. He also termed the AIUDF as a communal force.
