CPI(ML) leader and former MP Dr Jayanta Rongpi has held the Assam government responsible for the burning situation in the North Cachar hills district and said the Gogoi Government has failed to bring the situation under control.

Addressing a press conference here in the city, Dr Rongpi said the suspension of train services and shifting of railway employees from the trouble torn district have proved that the government has been failing to deal with the war like situation. The move to introduce separate unified command structure exclusively for the district will not help the people mitigate the problems they have been facing, he said. He also said that the insurgent activities could die out only if an autonomous body is formed to control both the North Cachar and Karbi Anglong districts.
