Around two hundred special police officers have been detained in Guwahati on Thursday to prevent them from staging protest in front of the DGP office in protest against the dismissal of their services.

The SPOs under the banner of the Special Police Officers' Welfare Society (SPOWS) gathered at Guwahati railway station to march towards the DGP's office at Ulubari. But, they were detained by police soon after reaching the Guwahati railway station area and were taken to the Sonaram playground. The SPOs were not allowed to proceed towards the DGP's office. But they have threatened to resume its protest on Thursday to highlight their plight.

About 278 SPOs were relieved from their duties in the Dima Hasao district in 2010 forcing them to stage protest demanding their re-engagement.
