In a bid to popularise the cultural richness of Tai Ahoms for the global reach , a website was lauched today at the Guwahati Press Club. Bijoy Bakal, Jaba Borgohain, Titu Kumar Hazarika and Buljit Buragohain formally launched the website <http://taiahominternational.org>. The aim of launching the site is to make available all sorts of information about the Tai Ahoms spreading across the world. After the launching of the website, all relevant information will be uploaded. Different aspects of the Tai Ahoms will be available in the website. Information on 'Institute of Tai Study and Research', located in Moran in Sivasagar district will also be available in the website. Significantly, 'Institute of Tai Study and Research' which has been publishing academic journals, teaching Tai Ahom language, preserving old manuscripts in a well organized library from its inception is the only such institute in the entire country. The website gives the chronology of the Ahoms kings in Assam, life history of the first Ahom king Sukapha and also about other Shan tribes. 'The website become a reality after lots of discussion which took place through networking site', said Jaba Borgohain, a BBM graduate. We shall try to upload all relevant information in the website. 'Internet has become vast source of information and it is important for us to put the information on Tai Ahoms', said Buljit Buragohain , a research scholar from IIT Guwahati.
